It’s Time for the Governor to Sign Access to Complex Rehab Technology into Law: You Can Help Make This Happen.

CIDNY advocates have urged the legislature to improve access to quality complex rehabilitation technology (CRT) for a long time. For patients with specific diagnoses and physical conditions who need equipment and technology that matches their individual situations, CRT is the answer. CRT can also help people to stay independent and avoid institutionalization.

Legislation to improve CRT access passed both houses and was vetoed by the Governor twice. A7492/S5741, a new bill, has now passed the legislature. It clearly prohibits a financial relationship between the prescriber and the equipment supplier—a concern the Governor raised. There is no reason for the Governor to continue vetoing this legislation.

Past recommendations to veto also came from the Division of the Budget, which speculated that while “difficult to quantify, this bill would likely increase Medicaid costs by limiting the State’s ability to achieve the ‘best price’ from durable medical equipment suppliers.” But their speculation does not include the extra costs to people and to Medicaid when health deteriorates because the right equipment and technology are not able to be accessed.

In deciding to veto in the past, the Governor completely disregarded the experiences of those affected by the lack of CRT. At least one CIDNY consumer advocate traveled to Albany twice. She told her story to legislators recounting the consequences of no CRT: her condition requires a wheelchair with a tilt feature that she must use every hour to avoid skin breakdown. While her chair was being repaired, her condition deteriorated so much that her doctor prescribed a wound care nurse who had to go to her home, at an extra cost. At the same time, she experienced more pain and suffering.

To get this bill signed, people on the Governor’s staff are asking to hear from you. They want examples of why it is important for Medicaid patients to have access to qualified rehabilitation technology professionals who can provide service and repairs. It is also necessary for them to understand the need for retail locations in the State.

And you can always call the Governor at 518-473-8390.

Important Information about Public Charge

The federal government recently changed the rules they use to decide if someone is a “public charge” when applying for visas and for green cards. The new rules start on October 15, 2019. Despite this change, public charge still doesn’t apply to many people, and most federal government programs aren’t included in the rules.

Public charge is the test the federal government performs to see if someone is likely to become dependent on specific government programs when applying for a visa or for a green card. A person who uses some kinds of benefits from the federal government might be considered a “public charge,” however, just using federal government programs does not make you a public charge.

What hasn’t changed about Public Charge?

The public charge test is not done for anyone who has a green card who wants to apply for citizenship. It currently only comes into play for those applying for a visa or applying for a green card.

Additionally, if you have the following visa statuses, the public charge test is not done as an exception in applying for a green card: Refugee and asylees, victims of trafficking (T visa), victims of domestic violence or other serious crimes (U visas), VAWA self-petitioners, special immigrant juveniles (SIJS), and some other immigrants. If you are an immigrant with one of these statuses, you can apply for a green card and won’t be considered for "public charge" no matter what.

What has changed with Public Charge?

Right now, the only federal government programs that might put you at risk for "public charge" are cash assistance like Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) and Social Security Income (SSI).

When the new rules go into effect on October 15, 2019, the added programs that could put you at risk are:

- SNAP (food stamps)
- Non-emergency Medicaid (this does not count healthcare services, the Essential Plan, Emergency Medicaid, or Medicaid for pregnant women and children under the age of 21)
- Section 8 and public housing

If you are an immigrant, you might not qualify for these benefits anyway. Additionally, any benefits received by your U.S. citizen children does not count against you for "public charge."

What should I do now?

You don't need to cancel your benefits if you're not at risk of being considered a "public charge." Even if you are, it is important to think about what programs you and your family need as well as immigration concerns.

Before making any decisions about disenrolling from benefits due to public charge, please call your benefits counselor.

They can provide more information related to this issue. Also, please call them if you need resources like free legal advice for your immigration issues or if you have questions.

All information will be kept confidential.

Save CDPA Case Update: Groups Sue NY over Cuts to Long Term Care

At the end of July, as people with disabilities celebrated the 29th anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act, a group of associations and providers filed papers, suing the New York State Department of Health (DOH) over a recently announced funding policy. They say the new method will bankrupt Consumer Directed Personal Assistance (CDPA), a popular Medicaid program that lets 90,000 people live independently in the community. CDPA allows seniors and individuals with disabilities to take charge of their own services and has become increasingly popular over the past several years.

The associations filing suit are the Consumer Directed Personal Assistance Association of NYS (CDPAANYS), the New York State Association of Health Care Providers (HCP), and the New York Association on Independent Living (NYAIL), of which CIDNY is a member.

The Court denied the State’s motion to dismiss and is accelerating the full resolution of the case. The Court set a new return date for Sept. 13th.
